

The deep end

From this vantage point you can look down into the deep end of the 1936 Olympic-sized pool, and appreciate the original decorative tiling and underwater lighting. The lane numbers are marked in roman numerals, and along the sides handcrafted ceramic plaques indicate the depth in imperial measurements.

This northern end of the pool originally featured a floodlit steel diving tower, with diving boards at three, five and ten metres, as well as a novelty water slide in the early years. The pool floor sloped down at the northern end to a maximum depth of about five metres. This space now contains the pool's plant and equipment.

The main pool, showing the diving tower and water slide, about 1940
Courtesy of Granville Historical Society

